Service of Worship

Seventh Sunday after the Epiphany

February 23, 2014

Eleven o'clock in the morning

✻ Keeping the heart of the University listening to the heart of God ✻

---

Christians sometimes believe that the God of the Old Testament is somehow different from the “loving” God of the New Testament. This is a heresy that was dismissed by the earliest Christians. The passage in Leviticus shows compassion has always characterized God’s law. God commands that farmers leave the edges of the field and some fruit unharvested, so that the poor and alien may glean them for food. It is in Leviticus that followers are instructed to love their neighbors as they love themselves. In Matthew’s gospel, Jesus intensifies and expands the demands of the law, commanding that followers turn the other cheek, go the extra mile, and extend love not only to neighbors but also to enemies and persecutors.

The congregation is asked to remain silent during the prelude as a time of prayer and meditation.

An active member of both Duke Lutherans and Presbyterian Campus Ministry, Hannah is also a Chapel PathWays Scholar and a regular participant in Chapel worship. Throughout her time at Duke, she has been particularly interested in ecumenism and interfaith engagement, including being a founding member of the Undergraduate Faith Council on which she still sits. In her free time, she enjoys working with the Chapel youth group. She would like to give special thanks to all of her friends and family for supporting her throughout her sermon writing process.
